

2006

Beltline: Ansley Mall Exhibits

Heritage Preservation students at Georgia State University, supervised by Richard Laub

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.gsu.edu/history_heritagepreservation

Part of the Historic Preservation and Conservation Commons

Recommended Citation

Heritage Preservation students at Georgia State University, supervised by Richard Laub, "Beltline: Ansley Mall Exhibits" (2006).
Heritage Preservation Projects. 1.
https://scholarworks.gsu.edu/history_heritagepreservation/1

This Photograph is brought to you for free and open access by the Department of History at ScholarWorks @ Georgia State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Heritage Preservation Projects by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks @ Georgia State University. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gsu.edu.

Ansley Node: Exhibits

Map of node with node boundaries and center indicated

Piedmont Driving Club, 1902

THE SPECTATORS all stood up to watch football in 1895. Auburn was playing the University of Georgia at the Exposition Grounds (Piedmont Park) on November 28. Some of the players wore leg and nose guards, but no helmets or padded shoulders were in evidence. The referee performed in a cutaway. In the background is the Southern Railway main line (now belt line). The open-platform Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad passenger coach at right was far from home.

Piedmont Park football game with train in background

WHAT ANSLEY PARK HAS

Every known facility for home comfort or convenience is found in ANSLEY PARK. Gas, water, sewers, telephones, electricity, car service, paved driveways, plenty of fresh, pure air, and—everything else.

Golf links, polo grounds, outdoor swimming pool, tennis courts, recreation parks, golf club house, all right at the home door are now most valuable features of completed ANSLEY PARK.

It has beauty of scenery unsurpassed by any spot in or around Atlanta.

It has homes worth as high as $100,000—some, in fact which that figure could not buy.

In a word—
It is, and it has, "the goods."

Partial Home of Edward H. Inman.

WHAT ANSLEY PARK HAS NOT

It has not and NEVER WILL HAVE a store, a garage, a factory, a hospital, a sanitarium, a shop of any kind.—
Deed restrictions keep them out perpetually.

It has not and never will have a home belonging to a person of color or occupied by one other than as a servant on the premises.

It has no unsightly misplaced houses; peremptory building lines have guarded against this.

It has nothing but homes—handsome homes—of Atlanta's best and foremost citizens.

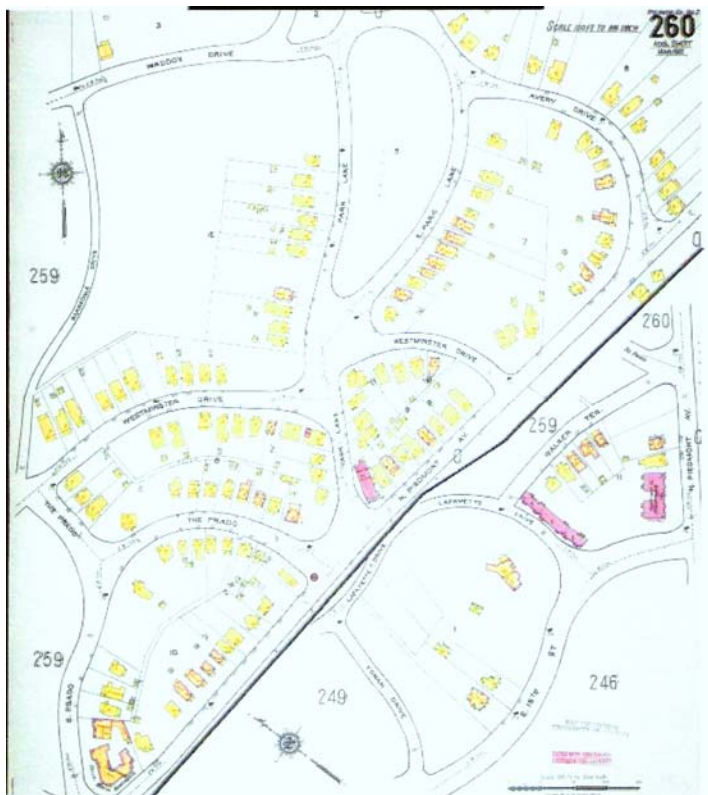

IT NEVER will have anything else.
IT NEVER CAN HAVE.

Real estate flyer for Ansley Park

1907 Photo of Ansley Park

1921 sanborn map

1927 topographical map

The Morningside Shopping Center

1947 (The Atlanta Constitution, AHC Files)

1983 (Morningside/Lenox Park Newsletter, AHC Files)

2006

1949 aerial photo

Photo ID 3: triangular building 1400 block Piedmont

photo ID 4: M'side strip looking south to overpass

Photo ID 5: Smiths Olde Bar decorative brickwork

Photo ID 6: Masonic Lodge detail

1906

1907

1908

1931 Morningside real estate flyer

1514 Monroe Drive

1518 Monroe Drive

Line and trolley pole repair. Work car and crew on trestle near Piedmont Park, circa 1896.

historic photo trestle

current photo trestle behind Ansley Mall

Villa Apartments

Ansley golf scene

2006 Aerial

